Manchester Restoration Program Receives National Award

A Manchester Restoration Program which has been a product of more than a decade of work and which has operated jointly with the local citizen's committee and the Urban Redevelopment Authority of Pittsburgh has received a 1975 National Award for Excellence in Environmental Design from Design and Environment magazine. The program will be described fully in the summer issue of Design and Environment and will be included in a book that deals with innovative environmental design programs throughout the country that will appear later in the year.

Eleven years ago when we first started our work on Liverpool Street, all of Manchester was slated for demolition. As a result in a change in City administrations and an aroused citizen's group, we were able to develop with the Urban Redevelopment Authority an innovative Urban Renewal Program which calls for the restoration of all PHLF certified buildings in Manchester. The Urban Redevelopment Authority carries out the exterior restoration in cooperation with PHLF at no charge to the owner and further makes grants and loans available to low income owners for interior improvement of the properties.

In this way no dislocation occurs. Pittsburgh has, in fact, the first urban renewal-through-restoration program for low to moderate income people in the nation.

Unfortunately the program suffered two major setbacks in recent years. President Nixon impounded the loan and grant money for two years which created considerable deterioration of structures and then the Urban Redevelopment Authority began demolishing many of the deteriorated buildings. Recently a new agreement has been worked out between URA and PHLF with the assistance of the Department of Housing and Urban Development so the demolition will affect far fewer historic buildings. The local citizens organization and PHLF are endeavoring to set up a non-profit restoration corporation to assist the Manchester Urban Renewal Program.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON PROGRAMS

First and Third Sunday afternoons of each month will feature slide/film/lecture presentations in the Belfour Gallery. These programs will be varied, with the purpose of showing the work of PHLF as well as special events. The programs will be free with admission to the Museum, and will be presented at 2:30 p.m.

Many thanks to the Kindergarden Club of Fox Chapel who are donating and planting flowering plants in the Garden Court for the summer season. The work is to be completed the first week of June.

Glenshaw Station

Historical society seeks to save landmark

The Shaler Historical Society is asking the North Hills community to join it in an effort to save and restore the old Glenshaw Railroad Station on Route 8, a landmark since the turn of the century.

After the story of its demolition by Busy Beaver Remodeling Centers, Inc., appeared in News Record, the society contacted Mrs. Rene Waun of McKeesport who had first learned of the threatened demolition. She initiated a campaign to stop it.

The North Hills Jaycees also contacted Mrs. Waun and offered help in fund raising and business services.

The society asked Shaler commissioners for help.

The commissioners said they would provide land for the building if it had to be moved and if the society could not obtain property in the Glenshaw Valley near other historical landmarks.

Robert Bleil, president of the Shaler Board of Commissioners, and William L. Crawford, township manager visited Barry Lhormer, president of Busy Beaver, and asked him to reconsider and leave the station where it is.

Busy Beaver leases the land on which the station stands from the Chesie Railroad System and planned to tear it down to make room for expansion of its business.

CHAIRMAN'S RAMBLE

The whole urban preservation movement is in grave danger. Three New York cases, two in the appellate courts and one in the lower court, have decided that preservation zoning and landmark designation are unconstitutional as applied to 1) preventing a charity - the Lutheran Church - from demolishing a landmark - the Morgan House - when it appeared economical to the charity to do so to achieve greater income from the property 2) preventing the owners of the Grand Central Terminal, a city-designated landmark, from despoiling the building by erecting a skyscraper in the air rights above the station and 3) maintaining the Steinway Area in Queens - a dignified old human-scaled worker's community 100 years old as a preservation area under the jurisdiction of the Landmarks Commission.

The argument went each time: You are preventing us from developing our property, you are depriving us of income, without corresponding chance of enhancement and therefore we are being deprived of our property without due process of law. In the case of the Steinway house area the New York Times reported some owners of the houses as sympathetically inclined to the designation of historical significance, but antagonistic to the provisions of the law that following such designation no exterior changes can be made without Commission approval. We can sympathize at first blush with the proud independent house owner who loves his home there. "I don't need to ask a Commission if I can paint my house or add a porch on or put a side entrance in." The answer of course is, no Commission will stop him from painting the house or adding the porch or putting the side entrance in if the effect of the whole area is not destroyed or diminished. And what he gives up in pure individualistic clout (which includes of course the power to destroy or render obnoxious) is the very thing which in the long run renders his property more valuable year after year.

The self-same arguments were made in the very beginning against zoning laws in general. The preservation ordinances are nothing more than modern extensions of the old zoning philosophy. Does any one now argue that Shady Side or Highland Park or Fox Chapel need not have a steel mill or a city incinerator or a race track or a burlesque house or even a highrise next to single (or double) family residences? Perish the thought. We've advanced farther than such barbarity. Why then rule out the preservation of well-maintained artifacts of the past on the grounds of economic necessity? True, extreme cases can develop in highly congested high-priced urban centers, but there again some zoning credit plan can and must be developed (the "Chicago Plan" named after Chicago, but not adopted there), so that economic loss from maintaining the older structure be not acute and unduly burdensome.

The smallest European town has learnt the lesson despite centuries of warfare and unrest, that architecture of all arts is the most lasting, the most satisfying and useful of the arts. It is the most compelling attraction to the visitor from other lands. When will America learn the same truth?

Lhormer said more space is needed for their business, but agreed not to do anything until the end of the year. Busy Beaver also agreed to donate $500 to the project of moving and restoring the building.

In order to apply for a Bicentennial and other grants, matching funds of various percentages must be raised locally. That is where the people of the North Hills, especially the Shaler area, come in. Donations of cash or services are being solicited from individuals, businesses and clubs in the area.

Mrs. Donald Miller, acting president of the society, said:

"Architects have told us the station is an excellent example of Victorian architecture and is well worth saving, aside from its tremendous significance to the community as a remnant of the old whistlestop days.

"We are asking everyone to help in the fight to keep another old landmark from disappearing from the scene."

Donations, which are tax deductible, may be sent to the Shaler Historical Society, P.O. Box 33, Glenshaw, 15116.

Mrs. Richard Dorrell and Mrs. George Beitler are chairmen of the Railroad Station Preservation Committee.

Neighborhood Program News

Allentown

The Allentown Neighborhood Exhibit, prepared by the Hilltop Civic Improvement Association as part of PHLF's Neighborhood Exhibits Program, will open Sunday, June 22 with a special reception for City and County officials and the community.

The Exhibit, entitled the "Grand Opening of the New Allentown" represents seven months of study of Allentown by neighborhood residents with PHLF. It portrays Allentown as it is seen by the people who live in this hilltop community. Exhibit materials were gathered from community meetings, interviews conducted throughout the neighborhood and a walking tour of Allentown.

The focal point of the Exhibit is a pictorial description of the neighborhood. Large blow-ups of pictures taken by neighborhood residents describing various aspects of Allentown: its people, its architecture, its history, its strong points and its problems will be on display. Proposed solutions to problems identified throughout the program will also be included in the Exhibit.

A vacant storefront, the Hilltop Grill, on War-rington Avenue, in Allentown's commercial district, has been donated for the Exhibit site. On June 17, volunteers from throughout the neighborhood will gather to assemble the exhibit.

The Exhibit will be open for one month; it will be staffed by volunteers from the Hilltop Civic Improvement Association. The grand opening of the New Allentown will then be on display at the Old Post Office with exhibits from Glenfield, Northside, and Liberty School. A publication about Allentown is also being prepared.

North Side

Through PHLF's Neighborhood Exhibits Program, northsiders have sponsored two poster contests. The first contest open only to residents of the North Side offered prizes for posters in four categories: 1975 Summer Events on the Northside, The Resources of the Northside and two posters depicting solutions to problems of the neighborhood.

At a community meeting, April 13, two winning posters were chosen. Craig Highberger a resident of Allegheny West was awarded $50. for his poster describing the Northside Summer Events and Steve Foberts a resident of Central Northside was awarded $50. for his poster describing the resources of the Northside.

A second poster contest offering a prize of $100. each for 2 posters about the Northside is still accepting entries. This contest, open to anyone in the City or County is for a poster describing any aspect of the Northside: its resources, its people, its history, its architecture or its problems and possible solutions to the problems. Entries are still being accepted at the Old Post Office Museum.

South Side

Beginning this month low interest loans will be available to Carson Street merchants for exterior restoration through a special restoration loan fund program developed by the South Side Chamber of Commerce and PHLF. A complete restoration store-by-store plan for Carson Street has been developed by Jerry Peckich, South Side businessman, and John Martine, architect.

The program funded by the South Side Chamber of Commerce and matched by PHLF through a grant from the Hillman Foundation will be available to those merchants and store owners on Carson Street who wish to restore the exterior of their buildings but cannot afford to do so. Through the program, the store owner will be expected to pay 50% of the restoration costs and PHLF and the South Side Chamber of Commerce will each pay 25% of the costs.

Eligible for funding in the program will be new awnings, signs, exterior painting, planters and new lighting. The maximum loan made will be five hundred dollars. 85 storeowners have signed up to participate in the program.

Additional money will be available for restoration through the City of Pittsburgh's Community Development Block Grant Small Business Rehabilitation Revolving Loan Fund. The City loan office will open on the South Side this month.

Pittsburgh Park and Playground Fund Assists Birmingham Restoration Program

Working through PHLF, South Side Arts and Crafts Council has obtained funds from the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy's Pittsburgh Parks and Playgrounds Funds to beautify three vacant lots on the South Side. The lots at 1101 Carson St, 1010 Carson Street and 1301 Bingham Street will be developed as parklets.

Thomas A. Armstrong Redivivus

A once familiar member of the statuary population of the North Side parks has been returned to public life and has been placed in a new position in the landscaped setting recently constructed at the juncture of Federal Street with Allegheny Square North. Thomas A. Armstrong, a late 19th century editor and "a friend of the working man", carved life-size in limestone, has through the efforts of PHLF been resurrected after having lain neglected for several years in the City's sculptural bone yard near the Aviary. The statue had been knocked from its pedestal in West Park by a runaway truck in 1969.

Thomas A. Armstrong (1840-1887) was a well known local figure in his time and a newspaperman devoted to the cause of Labor in a day when it really needed defending. Born in Steubenville, Ohio, he came to Pittsburgh in 1857 to learn the printer's trade. He worked for the old Pittsburgh Commercial Journal. After service in the Civil War, in which he was twice wounded, he returned to this city and became editor of the Labor Tribune. In the 1870's and '80's he fought constantly for the cause of organized labor and governmental financial reforms. In 1882 he was the labor candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. A charter member of the Pittsburgh Press Club in 1884, he was active in its affairs. In 1887, he died from the result of an accident which reopened one of his Civil War wounds. In 1889 his statue was erected in West Park at a cost of $10,000; it was paid for by contributions from workingmen throughout the United States.

The writer had always been fond of the statue as a good example of local Victorian statuary and public piety. Tom, although a statue, was a familiar figure and a friend; even after his lamentable fall in 1969, we tried to keep his memory green. When PHLF in 1971 was looking for examples of 19th century public sculpture to place in our projected garden court (happily dedicated last year) we offered to give Tom an honored place therein and tried to interest Labor organizations in his sculptural resurrection. When we petitioned the City, however, Mayor Flaherty decided that the municipality should have the task of reerecting his image and restoring him to public regard.

Now as we of PHLF look upon our friend, this "advocate of the Rights of Labor" with his Victorian business suit and rotund "corporation", we hail once more his eminence among us.
